Information for Students

First and foremost, students must follow any guidelines issued by the School of Engineering in carrying out their project work.

This log book should be used by students to document the activities that they perform during their project work in ENS3201, ENS4152, ENS4253, ENS6126 or ENS6127.

It is the student's responsibility to

- (1) regularly record in this log book the details of their work progress,
- (2) present it to their supervisor(s) for review during their scheduled meeting times, and
- (3) keep it safe from damage and/or loss.

Entries should include everything that is relevant to the project such as problems worked on, ideas, concepts, meetings, testing procedures, results irrespective of success or failure, and any leave of absence or other factors causing delay of the work. Do not remove entries. If a change is required, simply strike out the original entry, add brief reason and make a new entry.

Simply attach another log book to this if extra space is required.

Students should submit their log book together with their project report at the completion of each unit. Separate log book should be used for each ENS4152 and ENS4253 unit (or each ENS6126 and ENS6127 unit for the case of postgraduate study).

Finally, it is of paramount importance that students must ensure that they maintain regular contact with their supervisors during their project work.

Progress Log

This serves as a remainder and checklist of the major milestones.
